Her outlook is indeed tragic, for the crafty priest. Dubro, and his superior, knowing that she would fall heir to a large fortune on the death of her invalid mother, had determined that she shall enter the convent and thus enable the chilphen to selse the wealth that otherwise would come to her. Moreover, her beauty is also a fastor in impelling the senso-all Dahro to insist upon her entering the great prison-like convent which stands back of St. Andrew's church. The mother quickly falls a prey to the wiles of the priest, and together with the latter finally breaks down the girts opposition.
